RUSSIAN NIHILISTS.

THE CZAR AND ROYAL FAMILY TO BE SPARED FOR TWO YEARS.

Plans to Overthrow the Russian Government With But a Single Blow—England's Disgraceful Comedy—Among the Powers—Foreign News.

KHARKOFF, Little Russia, May 12.—A nihilist congress was held here during the past week which is likely to have tremendous consequences throughout the empire. A sort of nihilist reformation has been proclaimed on principles no longer confined merely to the destruction of the existing social system, but to the creation of a new system capable at any moment of being put in force and of fulfilling all the requirements for the administration of the state.

The congress decided that for two years no attempt shall be made against the life of the czar nor any member of the imperial family. Every possible effort will be made to induce the czar to issue the constitution that was actually signed by the late czar on the very day of his assassination, but which was never promulgated.

If the congress of the nihilists a copy of a "thesis" of the nihilist, the tenor of which has been guarded as a profound secret by the imperial family, was read and discussed and unanimously approved. It is believed that the nihilists obtained a copy through the Princess Dolgorouki, the late czar's Morganatic widow. This constitution is of a liberal character, based on that of Germany, and if promulgated will be the virtual end of Russian autocracy.

If at the expiration of two years the czar refuses to grant the constitution then the policy of assassination and terrorism will be inaugurated on a scale never yet attempted. Kharkoff has long been the hotbed of nihilism, and a Russian professor formerly attached to the university of Kharkoff, who at the present moment may be considered the successor to the famous Kheyfetz, has communicated the following views:

"Nihilism exists today in more force than ever before. Nothing better proves its discipline than the present abstention from nothing is to be gained by drastic measures. Over four thousand officers of the Russian army are now included in the nihilist ranks. The next time that nihilism moves it will be with crushing force and will overturn at once the entire social fabric."

"The czar is a man of most foolish intellect; he has neither talent nor taste for government nor for choosing able advisers. He should rule alone for the moment the ultimate and aim of the nihilists. An Anglo-Russian war would not be an element to be feared by the nihilists. They would even see in such a war the nihilists would hear heartily with the existing government to fight the common enemy."

Austrian Plans.

VIENNA, May 12.—Austrian diplomacy rejects the Russian invitation. Foreign here laugh at the position of Mr. Gladstone. Proud old England is ridiculed in the most offensive way by the famous Englishman. He has achieved, for once and by himself, diplomatic victory. Austria government's chief take to themselves all the credit having preserved the peace. The political-ministerial office imagines himself a king of angels of peace. Austria's whole course of policy has been laid out in the most brilliant manner. Austria's whole course of policy has been laid out in the most brilliant manner.

According to the Dardanelles was opened in a manner in Constantinople. In conclusion of an Anglo-Turkish convention, according to which the Dardanelles was opened in a manner in Constantinople. In conclusion of an Anglo-Turkish convention, according to which the Dardanelles was opened in a manner in Constantinople.

By threatening to occupy Macedonia the sultan became terrified, and with this England was compelled more and more to a peaceful settlement. The difficulty with Russia. Yet Austria has always been hostile to Russia. Within the last ten years we have seen three times the overthrow of a war with her. Now, however, the Dardanelles-Bund appears with all its might against England in order to render her harmless in the future settlement of the Oriental question.

From good authority it is learned that Austria and Russia have come to an understanding about the Orient. England is left out of calculation altogether. To make this understanding with Austria a recent action toward England. There are many in Vienna, however, who consider the alliance with Russia a matter of deep regret, and there are prominent persons in the highest political circles who consider the exultation over England's diplomatic defeats to be premature.

The rejoicing over the prospect of peace is dimmed by the fact that the same differences in Central Asia which have been made may come up again. The Russian government is insured for the moment, but how long it will not be one can say. Russia continues to prepare for war. Her military preparations are enormous. Austria is concentrating an army on the Lower Danube. In a short time there is to be a grand review of Austrian troops in Austria and after that preliminary maneuvers by the Austrian fleet in the Adriatic. The latter is to be a kind of dress rehearsal of Austria's warlike position. These grand naval maneuvers will shortly be the end of May.

Finally, the Archduke Johann is about to proceed to Bosnia and to assume command of the forces there. This prince was selected a few years back to be commander-in-chief of the whole army in any action in the part of Austria. In spite of all that is said to the contrary, these signs point to the fact that peace cannot be considered as assured.

What Herlie Says.

BERLIN, May 12.—The Afghan conflict, which at first blush promised to develop into a tragedy, has resolved itself into a comedy. That which promised to become a mighty struggle has turned into a simple family affair, in which the principal role is played by the royal family. In the Afghan (theater) performance, too, the Russian family of women have, contrary to general expectation, played a very important part, and the book of "The Affair"

THE PRESIDENT'S WORK

EXCLUDES CALLERS AND DEVOTES HIMSELF TO OFFICIAL LABORS.

Spring Weather in Washington—Assistant Secretary Fairchild—The President's Ancestry—Foreign Labor Law—Appointments—The News.

WASHINGTON, May 12.—The president was "not at home" to callers, though he did not have a holiday by any means. The decision to reserve one day in each week to transact public business without the interruption of callers was reached after a great deal of consideration. It was not intended to set up any exclusiveness as generally understood, but it is intended to give the president one day in each week when he can have the whole time to himself to examine the quantities of papers and endorsements that have been left with him from time to time by applicants for the various offices or by their congressional or other backers or friends. There were a number who tried to have interviews with the president, notwithstanding the public announcement that he has reserved one day for himself, but none succeeded. The doors were closed to all comers, and actually closed as those who endeavored to secure hearings ascertained to their satisfaction.

It was a pleasant view which met the president's gaze from his office windows, looking out from the south point of the executive mansion, when he settled down to business promptly at 9 o'clock. The fountain playing, the croaking of a froggy new and then on the old time graveled walks, the whirling of the scythe, the twittering of the sparrows or the chirp of the robins were all the sounds that disturbed the absolute restfulness and quietude of the president's home.

The white house makes rather a comfortable home these delightful spring days, and President Cleveland is in no hurry to vacate it for cottage life at the Soldiers' home. The annual house-cleaning will not begin until the president moves, and so the house is still in winter dress, but the breezes play through the opened windows, fluttering the lace and brocade hangings, and stray sunbeams light up the great length of the state apartments, making the whole of the presidential home as pleasant to feel, and the first effects of which we are enjoying here now. The white house is a centre of a scene of almost perfect verdure, so smooth and velvety are the green lawns and so beautiful the flowers ornamenting the walk grounds.

The rose garden on the left of the mansion as yet only suggests its prospective June glories, but the tulip beds are in almost luxuriant rankness, and the pansies in ribbon-like lines of exquisite color. Old-fashioned honeysuckles have clasped the winding rose, and the climbing vines and the familiar twining, and make a feature by means the least noticeable of the garden's beauties.

The impression was rather general that the marine band concerts would commence at the white house, and by 5 o'clock there was a great hubbub in the south park, but the band did not put in an appearance, the opening concert having been postponed for a couple of weeks.

At about 3 o'clock the president and Colonel Lamont started out for a drive, not returning until about 7 o'clock. The president accompanied a great body of his friends, and resumed business with his desk cluttered of papers, but ready to be piled up again.

A Troop of Boys.

St. Petersburg, May 12.—Advice through Vienna report that quantities of gun powder and dynamite are being stored at several casting places. Work continues on the Cronstadt fort. Telegrams state that the troops which passed there, just mobilized from the reserves, were a horde of unkempt, ignorant of the use of rifles, which some of them were hardly able to carry. Hungarian papers report that Peter, son of Emperor Franz Joseph, has gone to St. Petersburg to endeavor to obtain Russian support should he issue a manifesto asserting his right to the throne of Serbia. He also hopes that his father-in-law, the prince of Montenegro, will support his claim for force of arms. The Vienna newspapers are agreed that the policy, as a possible tool of Russia, must be closely watched. A Belgrade official paper denies his hereditary right to the title of prince.

Badly Mixed Affairs.

LONDON, May 12.—The conservative paper generally do not wish to vote adverse to the government of the war credit, but consider that the government ought to give the opposition more information as to the present state of affairs. The telegrams from India deny the reported resignation of Lord Dufferin. The military party in Russia continue to speak reports to the effect that the Russian army is the latest. The Russian captured at Pankaj some of Peter Lumsden's dispatches proving that he encouraged the Afghan to a collision with the Russians; that copies of these documents were sent to the English cabinet, and that therefore Lumsden was recalled.

It was proved by a witness that Elliott had said he believed the prisoner guilty, but there was not enough evidence to convict him. The court also fined Elliott $25 for contempt in speaking out of the case. The panel of the sixteenth was completed by the acceptance of an Alexander Hamilton. The court took a recess for an hour after which the defense will strike off of the list four names, and the remaining twelve names will be sworn in as the jury and the evidence will commence.
